

From the Editor

Dear readers,

As we continue with the second issue in the current year, we still enjoy undivided support of University of Belgrade, Faculty of Organizational Sciences. Our focus on sustainable business and management solutions, and emerging economy scope has been rewarded with more submissions, especially from abroad. We express our deepest gratitude to all the authors for their confidence and will do our best to justify it with fast and high-quality reviews. Our OJS web platform hosts more and more authors from emerging economies, and we encourage author out of Serbia to submit their best papers to our journal and support us in our quest for best indexing sources, like Clarivate JCR, SCOPUS, EconLit etc. We are very proud to have succeeded in cooperation with famous management guru, Ichak Kalderon Adizes, whose article opens our current 22(2) issue. Following paper is joint Spanish-German study regarding national culture and after sales perception in automotive industry, with very interesting empirical part regarding Chinese market. Close to that, in a field of organizational culture, is case study on organizational change. Fourth paper is quantitative analysis of the desired supply chain manager competences, based on the Serbian environment. Next comes the study of fuzzy analytic hierarchy process and technique for order performance by similarity to ideal solution application in analysis of employee productivity. Articles section concludes with two studies in educational background, first concerning case study benefits perception and the last analyzing e-learning attitudes. Issue is concluded with book review focused on clean energy problem, one of the key questions for development of emerging economies. We hope these articles will earn your attention and possibly deserve to be cited in your future research.

Yours Faithfully,
Mladen Čudanov
